DETAILED ACTION

Re-open Prosecution

Applicant is advised that the Final Rejection mailed 6/28/05 is vacated.

Prosecution on the merits of this application is reopened on claims 23-40 are considered unpatentable for the reasons indicated below:

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 23-26, 28-31, 33-35 and 37-40 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over ProQuest-Producing Sports Channel (pages 1-3). ProQuest discloses an edited baseball game provided to subscribers. The method claimed would naturally be used during the production and showing of the condensed game. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have selected an appropriate number of action shots recorded including substantially every pitch from a first pitch to the last pitch together with other action occurring during a game in order to permit the edited video to be broadcast in an allotted time.

As to claim 24: See claim 23 rejection. The decisions to record each appearance at bat for every player, the final pitch thrown to each player and successful and unsuccessful attempts by the base runners are design choices based on editing decisions by the editor or time available for broadcast. The specification provides no unexpected results in recording the action plays of the game. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have edited the video to reflect what the editor wished to record based on personal preferences and time available. The method claimed would naturally be used when the video was produced and played.

As to claim 25: No criticality is seen in the duration of the edited recording. The duration of the edited recording is a matter of design choice. The specification provides no unexpected or surprising results in using a edited recording of 15 minutes. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to have selected an appropriate length of time for the video to run based on cost and design considerations. The method claimed would naturally be used when the video was produced and played.

As to claim 26: No criticality is seen in the portion of the game recorded. The portion of the game recorded is a matter of design choice. The specification provides no unexpected or surprising results for recording a portion of a nine-inning baseball game.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to have selected an appropriate portion of the game to record and show based on cost and design considerations. The method claimed would naturally be used when the video was produced and played.

As to claim 28: The method claimed would occur naturally when the edited video tape was played. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to have included the method of playing the video tape since this is one of the logical reasons for producing the video. The method claimed would naturally be used when the video was produced and played. There is no patentable novelty in broadcasting a video. The means for display is a matter of design choice. The specification provides no unanticipated or surprising results from the various means of display chosen.

As to claim 29: ProQuest discloses an edited recording. Since the recording is broadcast, the inclusion of audio would naturally occur. No criticality is seen in the audio containing an explanation of any substitution of players. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to have included appropriate commentary in order to keep the viewer updated with accurate information and avoid viewer confusion. The method claimed would naturally be used when the video was produced and played.

As to claim 30: See claim 25 rejection.

As to claim 31: See claim 26 rejection.

As to claim 32: See claim 27 rejection.

As to claim 33: See claim 28 rejection.

As to claims 34,37 and 40: See claim 29 rejection.

As to claims 35 and 39: ProQuest discloses a premium subscription service (pg 2-paragraph 7). The method of obtaining additional revenue would naturally occur when subscribers opted for the premium service over the basic service.

Claims 27, 32, and 36 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over ProQuest as applied above and further in view of MediaChannel. MediaChannel discloses it is well known in the art to broadcast sports videos over the internet. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have employed the broadcasting method of MediaChannel in order to increase the number of people subscribing to the service.
